Staff tests trysts

In the interests of providing readers of The Easterner with the means to enjoy the rites of spring to their fullest, two dedicated staff reporters were assigned to field test the trysts listed in the Outdoors section [pages 10 and 11].

The following is their first person report.

The prospect of field testing campus trysts suggested by Outdoor Editor Rory Talkington filled us with anticipation and excitement, especially considering the rather dull assignments we usually receive.

However, from the outset of our testing effort, it was apparent that we'd have some difficulty consummating our assignment.

The problem became apparent at the first location we'd selected for testing. It was occupied by a communicating couple, the male member of which was so intent on getting his point across that we deemed it best to proceed elsewhere.

As we approached the second spot we'd chosen, we heard a series of loud cries and expletives. Thinking that perhaps some hapless individual had become entangled in the dense underbrush, we hurried to offer a helping hand.

When we reached the point where we could see what was happening, we became aware that there was, indeed, a great deal of entanglement, but the couple occupying the area had everything well in hand.

Moving right along, we approached the third location hopeful we'd be able to begin our assignment in earnest. Once again, however, we were disappointed.

We found a couple blissfully communing, so oblivious to our approach that we decided to move on unnoticed.

The next location we inspected was likewise occupied and we began to become suspicious. As far as we knew, the staff of The Easterner were the only ones privy to the information in Talkington's story, and none of those we'd encountered were staff members.

Emboldened by our sense of journalistic duty (and fearing the wrath of our editor should we fail in our assignment), we elected to do some investigative reporting.

We proceeded to the next location on our list and were confronted as we had, by now, expected to be, with another couple in the midst of vigorous communication.

Hearty parties!

The best of Mayfest '80 is yet to come and there are more things going on than those listed on the entertainment page.

The Easterner has received official notice of two parties open to Mayfest revelers.

Kenn Kassman will be the host of what he's calling a "pre-function," tomorrow afternoon beginning at 4 p.m. He says there'll be live music. We know from firsthand experience that his place at Williams Lake is ideal for a party - even has a bar downstairs.

Maps to show you the way there can be found at the Streeter Hall info desk.

There's a two-day bash planned at 308 Vine, here in Cheney. Casey, Ron and Dan say that partyers are welcome anytime, both days of the weekend.

They've got a good-sized yard and say those who want to are welcome to bring sleeping bags.

Also from personal experience, we can say unequivocally that these guys know how to have a good time.

Notice

This issue of The Easterner is heavily satirical, in the spirit of fun and festivity that Mayfest '80 engenders on this campus.

It is solely intended to provide entertainment to our readers and should in no way be construed otherwise.

The Easterner staff sincerely hopes its efforts enhance your enjoyment of what is undoubtedly the celebration of the year!

Let's have a ball!

the Easterner Opinions

Language of love

According to Webster's New Practical Dictionary, the most commonly used definition of the word intercourse is "Interchange of courtesies, etc.; communication; commerce."

There can't be a more apt description of Outdoor Intercourse Day festivities on this campus. There's nothing like gorgeous weather to snatch one from the doldrums of academia and thrust one into the joys of communing with (and in) nature.

Of course, the interchange of courtesies, communication and commerce all require the use of language. Considering that, it would seem that the proper employment of language would enhance and facilitate enjoyment of the day to its fullest.

More bluntly put, today is not the day to curb your tongue. Indeed, the cunning linguist will find himself beset with a myriad of opportunities to make new friends.

That is not to say that cunning is required to have a good time today. A festival atmosphere tends to open people up to others. A smile and an invitation are often all the enticement needed to exchange courtesies, etc., and communicate.

And there will be more than one language prevalent on campus. Music, for one. Sing along and harmonize; bring your guitar and your slide trombone.

Another language that might be especially apparent today is body language. The vocabulary is virtually unlimited, however, pronunciation and articulation vary so widely as to make the language highly confusing at times.

In this particular linguistic endeavor, cautious optimism may be the best policy. The consequences of a misunderstanding can be disquieting at best, disastrous at worst.

Undeniably, there'll be another language spoken, the language of love. Unfortunately, that subject must lie unexplored here. To articulate the language of love for public dissemination invites accusations ranging from journalistic irresponsibility to cries of "obscene!"

Suffice it to say it's a language as old as man and understood by every member of the species.

Literally (and figuratively), it's the reason we're all here.

Cars must be moved

Morrison, Streeter, Pearce halls and the A.S. is sponsoring a street dance tomorrow from 8 p.m. to midnight in parking lot 13.

Students who park in lot 13 are asked to move their cars by 3 p.m. tomorrow. They may park in any other lot, from noon Friday until 8 a.m. Monday and not be ticketed.

Students may also park in front of and behind Morrison Friday night only.

Dorms will not be responsible for cars left in lot 13 during the dance.

Undaunted, we made an attempt to query the two concerning the source of their information. Unfortunately, the closest we got to an intelligible response sounded something like "roaring."

A bit confused, but not discouraged, we moved on to the next location. The couple we found there appeared to have just arrived and seemed relatively aware of their surroundings.

Wasting no time, we asked the couple how they'd found the spot. The male member of the two replied simply, "She showed me," indicating his female companion.

"How did you find out about it," we asked.

Eyes twinkling, she replied, "Outdoors with Rory!"

Obviously, we'd been beat to the punch.

WHAT COULD THE ARMY POSSIBLY OFFER A BRIGHT PERSON LIKE YOU?

Drop your guard for a minute. Even though you're in college right now, there are many aspects of the Army that you might find very attractive.

Maybe even irresistible. See for yourself.

MED SCHOOL, ON US

You read it right.

The Army's Health Professions Scholarship Program provides necessary tuition, books, lab fees, even microscope rental during medical school.

Plus a tax-free monthly stipend that works out to about $6,450 a year. (After July 1, 1980, it'll be even more.)

After you're accepted into medical school, you can be accepted into our program. Then you're commissioned and you go through school as a Second Lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

The hitch? Very simple. After your residency, you give the Army a year as a doctor for every year the Army gave you as a med student, and under some conditions, with a minimum scholarship obligation being two years' service.

INTERNSHIP, RESIDENCY & CASH BONUSES

Besides scholarships to medical school, the Army also offers AMA-approved first-year post-graduate and residency training programs.

Such training adds no further obligation to the student in the scholarship program. But any Civilian Graduate Medical Education sponsored by the Army gives you a one-year obligation for every year of sponsorship.

But you get a $9,000 annual bonus every year you're paying back medical school or post-graduate training.

So you not only get your medical education paid for, you get extra pay while you're paying it back.

Not a bad deal.

A GREAT PLACE TO BE A NURSE

The rich tradition of Army Nursing is one of excellence, dedication, even heroism. And it's a challenge to live up to.

Today, an Army Nurse is the epitome of professionalism, regarded as a critical member of the Army Medical Team.

A BSN degree is required. And the clinical spectrum is almost impossible to match in civilian practice.

And, since you'll be an Army Officer, you'll enjoy more respect and authority than most of your civilian counterparts. You'll also enjoy travel opportunities, officer's pay and officer's privileges.

Army Nursing offers educational opportunities that are second to none. As an Army Nurse, you could be selected for graduate degree programs at civilian universities.

ADVANCED NURSING COURSE, TUITION-FREE

You get tuition, pay and living allowances.

You can also take Nurse Practitioner courses and courses in many clinical specialties. All on the Army.

While these programs do not cost you any money, most of them do incur an additional service obligation.

A CHANCE TO PRACTICE LAW

If you're about to get your law degree and be admitted to the bar, you should consider a commission in the Judge Advocate General Corps. Because in the Army you get to practice law right from the start.

While your classmates are still doing other lawyers' research and other lawyers' briefs, you could have your own cases, your own clients, in effect, your own practice.

Plus you'll have the pay, prestige and privileges of being an Officer in the United States Army. With a chance to travel and make the most of what you've worked so hard to become. A real, practicing lawyer. Be an Army Lawyer.

ROTC SCHOLARSHIPS

Though you're too late for a 4-year scholarship, there are 3-, 2-, and even 1-year scholarships available.

They include tuition, books, and lab fees. Plus $100 a month living allowance. Naturally they're very competitive. Because besides helping you towards your degree, an ROTC scholarship helps you towards the gold bars of an Army Officer.

Stop by the ROTC office on campus and ask about details.

UP TO $170 A MONTH

You can combine service in the Army Reserve or National Guard with Army ROTC and get up to $6,500 while you're still in school.

It's called the Simultaneous Membership Program. You get $100 a month as an Advanced Army ROTC Cadet and an additional $70 a month (sergeant's pay) as an Army Reservist.

When you graduate, you'll be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant, but not necessarily assigned to active duty. Find out about it.

A BONUS FOR PART-TIME WORK

You can get a $1,500 bonus just for enlisting in some Army Reserve units. Or up to $2,000 in educational benefits.

You also get paid for your Reserve duty. It comes out to about $1,000 a year for about 16 hours a month and two weeks annual training.

And now we have a special program to help you fit the Army Reserve around your school schedule. It's worth a look.

A SECOND CHANCE AT COLLEGE

Some may find college to be the right place at the wrong time for a variety of reasons. The Army can help them, too.

A few years in the Army can help them get money for tuition and the maturity to use it wisely.

The Army has a program in which money saved for college is matched two-for-one by the government. Then, if one qualifies, a generous bonus is added to that.

So 3 years of service can get you up to $12,100 and 4 years up to $14,100. In addition, bonuses up to $3,000 are available for certain 4-year enlistments in selected skills.

Add in the experience and maturity gained, and the Army can send an individual back to college a richer person in more ways than one.

We hope these Army opportunities have intrigued you as well as surprised you. Because there is indeed a lot the Army can offer a bright person like you.

Roots

Underground comics first published in the 30's

by Frances Bellinger

If one really wants to trace the roots of underground comics, he must start with under-the-counter publications in the 30s. These eight-page wonders demonstrated crude caricatures of Hollywood's stars and starlets engaging in forbidden sex acts.

The true insemination for the birth of underground comics, however, came in New York. Publisher Bill Gaines satisfied the first generation of fans with "Entertaining Comics."

These were the first comic publications featuring science fiction and fantasy. They were usually horror-inducing beauties with names like "Tales of the Crypt."

"Entertaining Comics" was the first and foremost publication attacked in a Congressional investigation into the effects of comic books on America's youth.

"Entertaining Comics" was brought before the public in sad, unfair publicity. It was compared with sleazy imitators and almost choked.

The Congressional investigation ended in the "Comics Code." This standard was self-induced censorship to protect the minds of the nation's young people.

"Entertaining Comics" answered by publishing their work (censored by their own editors, of course) under the name of a second publication that had been distributed to a lesser extent.

The name of the weaker publication that was used to cover the contents of "Entertaining Comics" was "MAD" magazine. It was a great idea. Gaines got rich.

Around about 1960, and until about 1962, "MAD" thrived as the leading competitor in underground comics. It was gobbled up by what has been termed "the height of Satire-Fandom." In 1963, this fandom died out, leaving "MAD" a juvenile piece of trash.

The major decline of "MAD" happened when the editor, Ed Kurtzman, left in a dispute and went to create "Little Annie Fanny" for "Playboy."

Down in Austin, at the University of Texas, just about 1965, there was a genius named Gilbert Shelton who was turning out a doomed-to-be-a-classic called "Wonder Wart-Hog."

His friend, Jack Jackson (Jaxon) was writing a blasphemous piece of work called "God Nose." Jaxon is often credited for the first and finest piece of underground literature in the world of comics.

The true historian of underground publications, Jay Kinney, says that underground comics didn't really start with "God Nose."

The birth happened two years later in Haight-Ashbury when Robert Crumb used a buddy's press to print up the first issue of "ZAP." The original cover price was 25 cents. He said it was more fun than designing American Greeting Cards and that is the key to his success.

By the turn of the decade, a vast array of underground comics was spilling in from inspired artists abroad. These, along with American publications, were sold in head shops across the United States, in preparation for the growth of this new fine art form.

Mayfest climaxes Sat.

Mayfest will climax Saturday starting with inter-dorm competition on the mall in the first annual "Almost Anything Goes." Everyone is welcome as a spectator.

After the mess is cleaned up, a Renaissance carnival and marketplace will be set up with students selling their crafts and various goods.

The music begins at 1 p.m. with "Dragon Fly." This electrical act should put everyone in the right mood for the rest of the day.

At 3 p.m. Seattle's "Allies" take over and shake the sky with rock and roll.

Things quiet down just a touch with the country-rock band of "Buckshot" performing at 5 p.m.

"Hot Stuff" will bring on the night with original rock at 7 p.m.

"The Hotz," a new wave band from Portland, will provide the finale for 11 hours of music.

Cocaine: Mystique — Reality

by Scott Miles

In recent years, cocaine has found a new popularity on the American drug scene. Expensive, yet easy to obtain, cocaine is a "glamorous" drug, generally associated with the elite jet set.

Yet, in spite of its popularity, relatively little is known about this old drug. Why has it suddenly resurged onto the drug scene? What are its effects? How does one obtain it? What are the federal and state laws governing it?

Cocaine: The Mystique and the Reality is an Avon paperback book that can serve as a reference guide to cocaine users or those who think they might like to try it.

The book is the result of a monumental study conducted by two psychologists, Dr. Ronald D. Wynne and Joel L. Phillips. Mammoth in its scope, Cocaine deals with every facet of cocaine usage imaginable.

From the origins of the coca plant to comments from celebrities who snort cocaine, this 300-page study manages to cover it all.

Unlike most books of its genre, Cocaine's intent is not to terrify readers into abstaining from drugs, rather it is an informative, researched study that gives facts on cocaine and its usage.

Although there are a few "horror stories" there are also comments from intelligent cocaine users who seem in control of their use of the drug.

Hopefully, Cocaine: The Mystique and the Reality can set a new trend in drug education. Instead of the "Reefer Madness" scare tactics that treat the public as impressionable school children, perhaps studies such as this one can educate the general public as they should be educated with sound, scientific facts.

'Blazing Saddles' shows on PUB wall tonight

"Blazing Saddles," Mel Brook's crazy take-off on the classic western, will be shown outside on the PUB wall today at 9 p.m. or whenever it gets dark. Full of classic scenes (men slugging horses, a black sheriff with a Gucci saddlebag) "Blazing Saddles" is Brook's most popular film.

The plot centers around a wicked businessman (Harvey Korman) who wants the land surrounding a small town. He manages the appointment of a black sheriff named Black Bart (played by Cleavon Little) figuring the townspeople will kill the sheriff and leave themselves defenseless. Comic insanity follows.

The film also features Madeline Kahn, wonderful as a lusty saloon girl, and ex-football player star Alex Karras, a lousy actor who manages to give a good performance as a hardnosed outlaw.

Bad taste is one of Mel Brook's trademarks. Jews, blacks and homosexuals may be offended at his barbs, but it is all in hilarious good humor.

Blissful Love Spent

Such warmth; blissful love spent
Has one yet to compare.
Eyes glistening with sunlight so fair
While souls entangled; to heaven ascent.
Two becoming one, is their intent
As trees swirl and birds sing with care.
Daisies fragrant the surrounding air
As they dream of only the present.

Reaching out gentle but firm
Lips surrender to the beckon of passion;
While bodies entangle upon grass in bliss.
Sheltered by nature's wall of fern
Lay two in love; as is fashion...
Till aroused by a new day's kiss.

Rick Wells

Love and Death in the Flowershop

The whole place geared for growing, rooting. But there
It was, the wizened face grinning, a plaster
Elf in the geraniums, Little Mister
Death in baggy britches & his wily grin.

Over my head, a bell in the shape of a flower
Will wrinkle the quiet of the little store,
Where seeds are opening lips in humid soil,
Easing out pale tongues, licking the loam.

Venus in miniskirt, cheerleader thighs, will come
Out from the hothouse through waxy wreaths to ask
"Can I help you?" She could. Her smile could send Complaisant Mercury, legs like a lucky split end,
Running in all directions with flowery greetings.
Under her sweater, two daffodil bulbs will assert
Their Right & Left to reward the gardener's art
With bold gold trumpets.

She will lead me on
Round the showroom: red and yellow roses
& pink buds, petals pouting to be enfolded
By her lips, & blood-red chrysanthemums, carnations,
& eloquent labia, vulvae of iris & orchid--oh,
These will undo me! & this is the way I will go:

I'll grin & simper & whisper, "Be kind, be kind!"
She'll pretend not to hear as she fingers my bouquet.
I'll reach for a bulbous buttock with a ho & a hey.
She'll twitch, a passionate hyacinth under my hand.
I'll fumble; she'll recover & make a dash
Round the table of jostling seedlings under the glass
In that final steamy hothouse. The the denouement:

I'll tackle her in the azaleas, hey nonny no.
I'll plant, she'll scream, I'll dig, she'll squirm, I'll sow;
& just then the Elf in his quaint nightcap will arrive
To turn me into a climbing vine, whose leaves
Are evergreen, but darken when I grieve.

Outdoor Intercourse Day

Outdoor Intercourse Day,
What can I say?
To go and have fun
And lay in the sun?

Or be grossly perverse,
What could be worse?
To pour oil on the bods
And imitate Greek gods,
Would be quite in tune,
With sunshine at noon.

Spring Outdoor Intercourse,
Who could endorse?
But now I understand,
Good ol' fun, music and band.

You know what some say
About this Intercourse Day!
That's what I thought it'd be,
Oh, dopey me!

Your Yard or Mine?

The eighth of May arrives each year,
a day you could say is symbolic.
But what's different about this day, is I hear,
it's set aside for frivolous frolic.
Outdoor love, or outdoor lust?
That my friend is the question.
It's sex outside, today or bust,
either one is real refreshin'.
It's time for romance, and I love your pants,
my eyes are really bulging.
If you've got the time, then I've got the mind
so how's about indulging.
So follow me baby, I'll show you the way,
don't worry about these outdoor distractions.
Though bushes bear thorns, and mosquitoes may bite,
I hear that love conquers all, even scratchin'.
"Where do you work?" My those panties are cute!
(I hate making small conversation!)
"I'd like to be sure that I'm not premature, please give up your coy hesitation."
You look so great that I hope I can wait, but I doubt I can hold on till then.
"Quick come over here! Well, never mind dear,
I seem to have done it again."
"I'll be ready to go in a minute or so, have a smoke, I'll be up to it soon."
"If you weren't so slow, we'd have made it you know."
"What do you mean you have a class at noon?"
"Hey, where are you going, you're not really going?"
I mean, going to leave me this way?"
She laughed and she said, without turning her head,
"If you're lucky, you'll see me next May."
--"But," she added with a giggle, "I seriously doubt it."

In a Fashionable Apartmenthouse in Tucson

11:00 and the neighbors
Are doing it again.
As I am about to drop off
To sleep they are doing
It again. First, the squeaking
Of springs as steady as a rusted
Metronome. I turn from the wall;
No use. Outside my window, a car engine
Throbs, falters and starts up,
Distracting me for a moment,
Replacing their quickening pace.
I listen intently hoping to sleep
Within its engine roar, drowning
Out the gasping breaths coming
Through the wall. But the car
Pulls away; the giggling has Already begun. The visions come
That make my own dreams
Small and improbable, recurring visions
Of chocolate mint ice cream
He smears on her summered skin;
Or her thin coat of electric fur
When the giggling ceases
And the deep purr begins.
She circles his naked body
As he trembles just slightly
Under her golden gaze; he yields
To her graceful assault, and again
The breathing, the giving and taking
What they have left of their passion,
Of their tired bodies. And then their hearts
Settle back into their lairs.
Tomorrow when I meet her
At the mailbox or on the stairs,
Her eyes avoid my wink, ignore
My scowl. She keeps her eyes
Low, as if she knows
What I know. Maybe
She hears me also:
My Buddy Holly records
Bouncing or breathing hard,
The long showers, or worse
Me peeing. Tonight, after a long shower,
A good vision or two, I'll bang
And shout through the walls
And forget for an evening
My plans to move.

Tryst List: 10 steps on the stairway to heaven

by Jacques "Boom-Boom" LaTrec

It has been brought to my attention that Outdoor Intercourse Day is soon to be upon us. Therefore, one must be prepared for the aforementioned activity.

In the course of my participation in the past four celebrations at Eastern, it has occurred to me that suitable spots have to be chosen ahead of time to make one's plunge into said outdoor interludes successful.

During the course of events in the mall, you may have chosen to become blind staggering drunk, so the romantic spot you and your mate pick should be as close to the mall as possible.

In past years, couples (or whatever?), have embarrassed themselves by enjoying the celebration in the full view of the crowd. This may be acceptable to some, but usually attracts throngs of people as well as the authorities.

Privacy, however limited it may be, can always be an outstanding argument to make your selectee follow you to heaven.

If you don't have handy access to an apartment or dorm; the following spots may be your ticket to ecstasy. Also, remember to re-attire yourself, as you may become the focus of attention and suffer a barrage of lewd suggestions and cat-calls pertaining to your recent endeavor.

The following is a compilation of hot-spots you may select for those particular Outdoor Intercourse Day activities. I have personally researched and reconnoitered each of the following selected spots.

Palpitation Points

1) Behind the Dental Building there is a little niche where the building sticks out toward Pearce Hall. This spot is very dark and secluded.

2) Under the entrance ramp of the Library there is space to crawl into. Very private and will stifle noise as well.

3) An access to underground pipeline which will accomodate two people nicely. Just lift the yellow cover and crawl in.

4) Under the wings of Tawanka there is a very dark area behind an elevator shaft. No one would come near here, bad reputation you know.

5) Underneath the walk-up ramps in front of Patterson Hall there is a good dark spot. You can also move over to the surrounding grass area.

6) Between the maintenance building and a small house there is a nice grassy area. Very romantic spot.

7) Between parked campus and State vehicles, move quickly though as they could pull out at any time.

8) Behind a large fireplace in back of Tawanka Commons. It may still be warm and cozy.

9) In front of the Science Building there is a big clump of bushes which can be used as very good cover. Nice and quiet.

10) Port-a-potties. I understand there will be several of these available for personal relief. Can be used for romantic purposes but may be too obvious.

These are just some of the best spots on campus for participation on the celebration day. Of course, you can improvise in any spot you want, but watch out for Campus Safety.

The best time to undertake your various activities is at night, as you will be less detectable. In case of rain, use the dark spots under the bleachers.

Bon chance!

Campus offers outdoor enjoyment, newcomers should beware of pitfalls

by Ellen Bayman

Spring is here, the skies are blue, the grass is green, and once again Mayfest is upon us. Mayfest means many things: bands, movies, roller-skating and naturally, Outdoor Intercourse Day.

For those of you who may be new to the university, here are a few helpful tips and pointers to get you started out on the right foot:

1. Avoid heavily traveled paths and walkways. Not only are they uncomfortable, but passersby tend to frown on this type of activity. If you must settle for a path, lay low and watch for loose gravel.

2. Although they are lovely and seemingly harmless, pine trees (or any tree bearing cones, for that matter) should also be avoided, if possible. The reason for this is the tendency of fallen cones to prick the skin. These wounds can be painful and irritating. Try to stay at least 10 feet away from trees of this kind.

3. Make sure there have been no sprinklers running in the area prior to your arrival. Sprinklers can saturate the ground, creating a sticky situation for both participants.

4. Stay out of the bushes! Don't fool yourself into thinking they're good camouflage. On the contrary, they may have just the opposite effect, making you very conspicuous.

5. Try to stay away from flowering trees, especially those that drop little twigs once in a while. These twigs can be deadly, poking and jabbing in all the wrong places at all the wrong times.

6. Be certain you are not on, near, above, or around an ant hill. This should be self-explanatory.

7. Flowers are pretty, but steer clear of them for this occasion. Don't be confused over which birds and bees you're supposed to be dealing with.

Look for a spot in the sunshine. If everything goes well, you might even get a nice tan out of it (be sure to turn yourself frequently).

If you follow these guidelines closely, you should make out okay on Outdoor Intercourse Day. Good luck!

Letters

To the Editor:

For too long now, men have been led to believe that Outdoor Intercourse Day was for them. An event conceived by men, for the pleasure of men, and at the expense of women. A day for men to bask in the sunlight of their masculinity, and sexual dominance.

We've been taught, and told that women were subservant and unthinking, innocent and naive, the unwitting dupes of men's fancies and whims; zombie-like creatures who desire nothing more than to stand in the kitchen and fry a loaf of bread in Wesson oil. And we fell for it boys, hook, line and sinker.

Well, I have some startling news about Outdoor Intercourse Day that I fear women have known for a long time now.

We actually make very few moves on this day (or any other for that matter) that those seemingly innocent ladies haven't first plotted, and schemed. They started early for this one, about two months ago.

You saw them. They were out there huffing and puffing in their sweats, jogging, logging in the miles that would eventually trim those waistlines down to a measurement that would make Jane Mansfield envious. Round and around the fieldhouse they'd go, while you sat back watching, secure in the belief that they were the weaker sex.

Oh, I know, you thought they were getting ready for Bloomsday. Wrongo, buddy boy, it was step one in Operation Intercourse.

This was followed by an appointment at "Peggie's Pamper Parlor," for the works; hair style, cut and perm, facial, makeup, and last but not least, a manicure.

Step three takes our lovelies to the second floor of the Bon Marche for one of those skimpy tube tops, and a pair of those slightly tight, and oh, so short shorts, or maybe a dash of sex appeal in the form of a string bikini.

Now that their look is almost completed, a few hours of Sutton Park sunshine, and they can take those golden, browned bodies on to step four.

I know that you've all encountered step four. It's that seductive smile that that girl's been giving you who sits in the front row of your Perils and Promises of Modern Chemistry class.

She gives you a provocative wink, and coyly turns her head just so, and then, with one shake of her tightly packaged derriere, she's got you.

You've been had, and all along you thought that it was your idea. Wrong again, chum, your idea only entered your head 30 seconds ago. Don't forget that this little honey is already on step four of an extremely elaborate, and well-devised plan, and your interest in her is merely an assurance that her scheme is working.

You've taken the bait, and all that remains is the task of reeling you in. But, she must, as tradition dictates, make you think that it's all your idea.

Eastern broadjumpers:

by Mike Westby

Broadjumping is fast becoming Eastern's most recognized sport. Perhaps due to the national acclaim that the team has received this year, placing two jumpers on the All-American squad, and capturing their division early in the season.

But maybe it is simpler than that. Maybe it's because this is Mayfest week, and after all, everybody loves a lover. Headcoach Harry Peters thinks that it's somewhere in between the two.

"Our philosophy this year has been to work on speed, rather than technique. All that matters at the end of the season anyway is how many you have in the win column."

Rickshaw Ribas, Eastern's broadjumping sensation from Japan, is currently leading the country in the most successful jumps, with 171, as well as holding the endurance record (72.1 hours). As a freshman starter, Ribas views his place on the team as "important, but not essential."

Coach Peters agreed. "Sure, Rickshaw has been important to our team this year, but it would be totally unfair to overlook the outstanding play of the other men."

One of the men to which the coach refers is Bif Night. Night has had a very successful season thus far. Night is close behind Ribas in most jumps, with 168. Though his endurance time is only 51.0, he does hold the number one spot in the nation for the tallest jump made, at 7'1".

The meet was being held in the Pavilion because of bad weather, and the girls were going through a basketball warm up. Had it not been for that situation the jump might not have occurred.

"It's a great triumph for Bif, personally, and for the team as a whole," Coach Peters said. "I'm so proud I could just bust, why the next closest jump is only 5'11". It was a great, great effort.

EWU hosted Central and Western Washington universities last weekend for a triangular meet. The Eagles left Western in the dust, 113-49, and CWU finished with an embarrassing 2½.

Central Coach Dick Limpid feels that his club would have stood a chance, had they not lost their rookie star, 'Rapid' Roy Rompem. Rompem, you'll remember, was disqualified from further NCAA II competition two weeks ago, when he accidentally jumped a janitor in the locker room.

This raises the question of drugs, and their use in this sport.

Coach Limpid says that he objects strongly to the use of drugs in any form in any circumstances. As the coach put it, "I refuse to subject our boys to that kind of animalistic treatment."

This, however, does very little to explain the large amounts of morphine, alcohol, and steroids that were found in Rompem's system at the time of the incident.

Eastern Assistant Coach Gary 'Go Get em' Gripler thinks that Limpid is lying to save his job.

Says Gripler, "Hell, he's got those guys so pumped up with junk that they'd jump on anything that moved." The coach added though, that this was his own personal opinion and not that of the university.

Eastern's next meet is tomorrow afternoon in Portland, Oregon, when the Eagles take on Portland State University in a non-scoring meet. After that, it's off to regionals for Peter's club.

When the coach was asked if he'd do anything differently in Regionals, he replied, "We'll stick with what's been successful for us all season, it's how many jumps," said the coach, "and not how you jump 'em."

Streaking fad remembered as more than just a pretty face

by Mike Westby

Streaking was a fad of the 70s that apparently has died and gone to flashpan heaven, along with countless hula hoops, Beatle boots, goldfish eaters, pet rocks and hot tubs.

But, not to be sold short, streaking had a few elements that those other "here today, gone tomorrow," gimmicks did not.

One of the things that made it appealing to both young and old alike was its intrigue. What do they look like with their clothes off?

No matter how many times you deny it, you know that you took a good, long, curious gawk at Fred and Mary Beth, when they streaked your brother's wedding reception. You had heard so many rumours going around school, that you were naturally curious whether Mary Beth dyed her hair blonde or not, and if Freddy was really Jewish. And though it was only a quick glimpse (unless you had your Polaroid handy) it was more than long enough to answer those long pondered questions.

Another selling point of streaking was that it was funny. There's something just inherently funny about a person whipping through a high school basketball game au naturel.

Do you remember that time when crazy Louie was gonna streak McDonald's, but he tripped and fell flat on his face in front of the take-out counter? And the lady asked him if he wanted his burger open-faced or between the buns.

Or better yet, when Vern streaked that ladie's auxiliary meeting, and we locked the door after he went in.

With or without these boobs and blunders, streaking was a hilarious pastime; for those who watched, and for those daring enough to do, it was something else all together. It was a practical joker's paradise. And when the joke was good, it was very good.

The third sad thing about the loss of streaking to our cultural scene was its pure artistic appeal. A magnificently executed streak was a thing of beauty. It was an emotionally stirring experience that fulfilled one's inner need to be rebellious and have a good laugh at the same time.

When a "big streak" (a term used to describe an extremely daring job) was being planned and replanned, practiced and revamped, gone over and polished so that it was flawless, and then pulled off to perfection, there came a satisfaction seldom felt, or equalled.

Need I remind you of the look on your aunt Martha's face when they streaked your niece's boring piano recital? If so, I still have the picture that I took while running across the stage.

Eagle Screams

I.M. White, Eastern's four time NAIA national pole vault champ, has denied rumors that he was kicked off the Eagle swim team last season on account of a racial problem with head coach Charlie O' Harrah.

"These rumors just aren't true," said White. "Many of my best friends are stupid Irishmen"...

Eagle baseball coach Ed "Too Old" Chrysler said he is not sure how his club will fare playing in a tougher division this year. Eastern, in an attempt to gain more notoriety, will compete in the American League East this season.

"The Orioles and Yankees have to be the favorites to win the division but you can never count our boys out," said Chrysler.

Asked about the possibility of his retirement at the end of the season, Chrysler said, "Now, I'll keep milking this job as long as I can"...

There have been a lot of rumors around campus lately about an increase in faggotry in Eagle sports. I've heard that if a guy drops his comb in the locker room, that means he's queer and wants to do something perverted to you. I'm not sure if it's true or not but until I find out, I'm punching out every butter-fingered punk, just to be safe...

National roundup

National Lampoon has recently revealed a secret plan involving the National Football and the U.S. State Department. According to the magazine article, the Pittsburgh Steelers, victors in this year's Super Bowl over the Los Angeles Rams, were to be airlifted into Teheran to rescue the American hostages.

The plan was scrapped, however, when Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw insisted on "calling the signals" for the rescue operation, despite the insistence by the State Department officials that he was "ill-equipped to make judgments in matter of delicate international counter-terrorist strategy."

Bradshaw's plan--approved by Steelers head coach Chuck Noll--was to enter Teheran disguised as a mullah, or holy man. He would then make his way to the embassy, gain entrance, and, assisted by his "students" (actually the Pittsburgh defense and special teams), throw the hostages to backs Franco Harris and Rocky Blier and ace receivers Lynn Swann and John Stallworth.

"We could have pulled it off, too," Noll insisted. "Terry's aim is real good, and are receiver haven't dropped a pass in two seasons. Besides, who else is going to save the hostages?"

Bill Walton, the dainty mountain man of the San Diego Clippers, is highly susceptible to paper cuts and may never play basketball again...

The National Hockey League has announced today that it is doing away with its regular season.

"The regular season is altogether boring and tedious," explained league spokesman Bitt McButt. Instead, the season will commence directly with the play-offs, which will be expanded to include the three teams heretofore eliminated by the regular eight-game schedule...

In an attempt to increase attendance figures, the Los Angeles Dodgers are going to fight their city's air pollution problems this season.

In past summers, residents of Los Angeles were urged to curtail outdoor activities due to dangerous levels of smog.

Dodger team owner, Ben Takin, has purchased 100 trillion cubic feet of fresh air from Oregon. He has promised to use the stockpile air on days when the Dodgers have home games...

Sports broadcaster Curt Gowdy, who has been dead since 1954, announced recently that he would boycott the summer Olympics in Moscow if NBC attempts to televise them.

NBC Network officials, requesting not to be identified, are delighted with the development. "We've been trying to get rid of Gowdy for quite some time now," said one network spokesman. "He's really hurt us in the ratings. He's about as exciting as non-dairy creamer"...

Coming up

A Mayfest Run has been scheduled for May 10. The course is 5.4 miles long and weather permitting will be run in the nude.

The run will take place in Paris, France, and is open to all Eastern students. Cost for registration, transportation, and after run festivities is only $1,505.00. This price includes a Mayfest Run T-shirt.

Broadjumping regionals will be held next Wednesday in the lower offices of Shonwalter Hall. All Eastern students are urged to come over, and cheer our nationally rated team on.

65. because you should already be convinced.
66. because all you have to do is come to the A.S. office before 5:00 p.m. today.
67. and fill out an application.
68. and it doesn't hurt.
69. and it's FREE!

Tailfeathers

Satire

by Gene Ambacher

Lunatic orgy

I've been informed that I'm to churn out a few lines of doggeral for this week's Easterner regarding Mayfest. I was not informed how to write about the campus's annual lunatic orgy, or why I should want to bother spending a sunny Sunday afternoon sitting on the stone entrance to Showalter, watching the grass grow.

(By the way, have you ever noticed that the lawn in front of Showalter has the greenest grass of anywhere on campus? I wonder, could this have anything to do with the type of organic fertilizer they use?)

Actually, Mayfest has been perpetuated by the corporate elitist A.S. as a means of taking everyone's mind off the upcoming election long enough to make sure that the "proper" candidates file before the deadline.

Mayfest does have certain advantages, however. It increases the number of bodies that take advantage of the sun, thus giving it at least a modicum of entertainment value in spite of seeing our hard-earned A.S. funds go to pay for the mega-decible racket that some people call music, turned out by the so-called bands that are brought in for the occasion.

Actually, some people may enjoy the festivities. Xantho is planning to make a speech from the top of the PUB, concerning the care and feeding of hemp for the express purpose of the production of rope.

We may never get a chance to see Dr. Frederickson in shorts, instead of the suit he's always wearing.

However, there is no truth to the rumor that the entire A.S. plans to streak through Tawanka screaming, "less starch; more protein."

To paraphrase a great American statesman, (who also had no idea what he was talking about) "I know not what course others may take, but, as for me, GET ME THE HELL OUT OF HERE!"

Won't unite!

Campus celibates non-action group

by R. Christian

Another oppressed minority is at last taking action. Too long have we been jeered and discriminated against in the dorms and at parties.

Too long have we been denied the dignity to do what we want, or don't want, to do. Too long have we been forced to sleep in lobbies while our peers participated.

Too long have we been decried for our positions, or because we don't know 69 of them. Too long have we been forced to endure hardship from those who do not understand.

We are coming out of the closet; we are forming our own celibacy action (or non-action) group.

Those of us that have the guts to stand up and be counted for not multiplying demand recognition. We're no different from you. We have the same hopes and dreams, although our desires are a bit different.

And we shall demand our right to be seen, heard and not felt.

The organization we propose will support for those of our orientation. We shall strive for recognition for all areas of campus life. (Even if no members of the A.S. Legislature qualify.)

In accordance with the rules of propriety which we, of course, hold in high esteem, the Central Celibates Commission of Practice (CCCCP) has drawn up a constitution which outlines our goals and organization.

The major aspects of the constitution include our credo, borne of many years of struggle, "Make War--Not Love," and the membership designation.

To become a member you must be designated a celibate of the first, second or third rank.

A celibate of the first rank has, by enlightenment, abstained from all other than intellectual intercourse.

A celibate of the second rank has indulged, but by enlightenment has chosen to abstain.

A celibate of the third rank hasn't and doesn't because he/she can't or others won't.

In addition, the constitution states that if at any time a member attains a higher enlightenment he or she may withdraw from the organization with only a loss of virginity.

Now ask yourself, "Can I, too, be a celibate?" We of the CCCCP are here to help. But if not, at least show us a little consideration.

Because, even without any discrimination, it still sure is tough to be a celibate.
